Fit for business?

At Express Medicals we know that looking after the health and wellbeing of your employees not only helps you to comply with legal obligations – it is also a sound commercial decision. Healthy employees are happy employees and the positive impact of comprehensive work health programmes on staff morale should not be underestimated. However, the administrative burden of organising effective employee welfare programmes can be immense. That's why hundreds of private and public sector organisations across the United Kingdom trust us with the health of their staff – and their business. We combine medical expertise with first-class service levels to take the stress out of your healthcare and screening provision.

Combining medical expertise with first-class service levels

When Dr. Dan Hegarty and John O'Donnell founded Express Medicals in 1996 their mission was simple: to provide world-class work health solutions along with excellent customer service. Since then this winning formula has seen the company grow in size and reputation to become one of the country's most respected providers of occupational healthcare, screening and testing services across a variety of business and industry sectors.

We pride ourselves in working in close partnership with our clients, helping you to develop and implement medical programmes that enable you to meet your compliance and legislative obligations, whilst championing the health – and productivity – of your workforce.

Helping you to be a best-practice employer

The requirement to comply with a wide range of health and safety obligations is a fact of life for many organisations. Whether fulfilling statutory legislation or contractual conditions imposed by a client, meeting precise screening requirements is often a complex, time-consuming and expensive task that cannot be avoided.

At Express Medicals we understand the need to satisfy compliance demands whilst minimising disruption to your operations. With clinics located across the country and visits made on-site when necessary, our services are easily accessible – and fast. So employees can get back to work or start new projects without delay.

Screening services you can trust

With substance abuse responsible for 60% of all industrial accidents, employers must be vigilant in monitoring personnel – for their own safety as well as the welfare of other employees and the public at large.

In collaboration with world-class forensic science services provider LGC Forensics, Express Medicals provides reliable and accurate drugs and alcohol testing services to help you meet your screening responsibilities. Whether tests are required on a random or periodic basis, or following a serious incident, we are able to collect samples and confirm results to you quickly and efficiently.

Looking after the health of your business

“By using Express Medicals’ services, we demonstrate to staff that our commitment to their welfare is more than just a token gesture. Employees are able to see that we are investing in their health and well-being.”

Catherine Rhodes, HR Manager at A-Plant.

“One of the things that makes Express Medicals stand out is the way that they make their services easily accessible for the people having medicals. Reducing the need for lengthy journeys saving us valuable time and money.”

Terry Dowsett, Rail Training Manager, BAM Nuttall.

“The work health programmes we offer our employees have been described as best-in-class and Express Medicals has been instrumental in helping us to achieve this. They listen to our requirements and deliver solutions that have a significant impact on the well-being of our workforce.”

Caroline Burke, Health & Safety Advisor, J Murphy and Sons Limited.

“The services that Express Medicals provides are invaluable in supporting our rigorous health and safety policies. Over many years, we have always found them to be fast, efficient and good value.”

Andy Crago, Compliance Director, Hydrex.
